A healthyliving award is granted subject to the following terms:

1. The award remains the property of the Awarding Body; the Awarding Body reserves the right to amend the award regulations and conditions as thought necessary.
2. The award is valid for two years. After two years the award will expire and the establishment must apply for re-assessment.
3. The regulations and conditions of the award must be adhered to at all times for the award period.
4. The Awarding Body can withdraw the award at any time, if the regulations and conditions are not being complied with.
5. The award will be withdrawn if the caterer is found to breach the food hygiene requirements of the award.
6. The award holder, must inform the Awarding body if:
  - There is a change in owner or caterer
  - The member of staff responsible for the healthyliving award leavesThe award can be withdrawn if there is a change in any of these circumstances.
7. If the award is withdrawn the award holder must remove from the establishment the award certificate and all promotional and marketing resources.
8. At the end of the award period the award holder must remove from the establishment all promotion and marketing resources. The award certificate can remain on display.
9. At the end of the award period, or if the award is withdrawn, the award holder must remove any reference to the award which appears in advertising or business material.
10. Award holders must co-operate with the Quality Assurance procedures. Failure to co-operate with the Quality Assurance procedures can result in the removal of the award.
11. The Award Charter must be displayed at all times on the premises.
12. Consumer Focus Scotland and the Scottish Government endorses the healthyliving award only and not the establishment; any advertising or publicity materials should reflect this.

I fully accept the award regulations as stated.
